What is Institutional Research?

The Institutional Research (IR) office at LCCC is the hub for all data and research about the college in the support of strategic and operational decision making. We aim to transform LCCC into an institution dedicated to continuous improvement through the power of evidence-based decision making. Our mission is to empower the college community and external stakeholders to use and understand data objectively, consistently, and with integrity for planning and decision making purposes.

Ethical research is very important to IR to protect our students and see them succeed at LCCC. We follow FERPA and the AIR Code of Ethics and Professional Practice in all we do. Additionally, we hold the following values:

- practicing the ethical use of student and employee information
- maintaining the ideal that student success is the end-goal of our research
- promoting the literate use of data at the college
- supporting robust decision-making processes based on research rather than anecdotes
- providing responsive, reliable, customer-friendly service
- building collaboration across the college
