PERSONALITY

General Description:

ENFJs glow with warmth and sympathy; they are creative and organized when helping others achieve their personal goals. Because ENFJs focus their energy outwards, into people, their main concern in life is for the well-being of their friends. They make compassionate and trustworthy friends. ENFJs understand people well; they are interested in theories of human behavior and want to learn more. ENFJs are natural organizers, and when they see someone suffering, they want to help. They are the ones who roll up their sleeves and get involved. ENFJs value harmony and typically bring out the best in others. For this reason, they make popular leaders as well as faithful supporters. They are excellent communicators, especially in a public forum, and make superb professional speakers.

Summary of Careers

ENFJs value harmony and personal growth as ideals, so they prefer to work in settings that promote these ideals. Since they are outgoing and organized, ENFJs adapt easily to organizational policies and procedures - as long as the procedures are in line with the achievement of their idealized goals. ENFJs will enjoy work that formally encourages them to help people get along better and improve themselves. Careers often chosen by ENFJs include the religious
